

Fall Principles Q&A

Q. How do students declare their intention to attend in person for courses or labs/tutorials?

A. Through registration a student would select the option which identifies F2F. On a weekly basis the registration reports are shared with the SAO's and Deans.

Q. What is the process if a student who has declared their intention to attend in person has a change of circumstances and needs to move to remote learning?

A. A change in student circumstances will be communicated through the faculty member assigned to the course and to the Chair.

Q. Will there be any resources available in the proctoring on remote exams?

A. Further details forthcoming – working group on assessment.

Q. If a CTF Member is offered a course posted for in-person instruction and is unable to teach the course, what is the process?

A. We have a duty to accommodate if the issue is medically substantiated and cannot bar a CTF Member for applying for the course based in their ability to teach in person. If possible, remote instruction will be considered an acceptable form of accommodation.
