

Deborah Glebe

Department of Psychology

We are delighted to recognize Deborah (Deb) Glebe for her remarkable dedication and contributions to Laurier. Deb is currently pursuing a Doctoral Programme in Clinical Psychology at York University. She holds an M.A. in Applied Child Psychology from the University of Guelph and an Honours B.A. in Psychology from Wilfrid Laurier University. Since beginning her teaching career at Laurier in 1993, Deb has taught over 150 courses, primarily in the field of developmental psychology. Her extensive experience spans both on-campus and online courses, making her an invaluable asset to our academic community. Deb's commitment to excellence is evident in her consistently high student evaluations.

Deb's approach to teaching is collaborative and student-centered, fostering an engaging and dynamic learning environment. She has contributed to the broader community through invited presentations and guest lectures, demonstrating her willingness to share her knowledge beyond the university setting. She has also held teaching positions at Conestoga College and St. Jerome's University.

We are grateful for Deb Glebe's unwavering dedication and look forward to her continued contributions to Laurier.
